

Scouting players and advanced scouting on opponents

Teil 1: Scouting players, evaluating them, profiling, reporting and following the player.

Scouting scale

- 80 – Elite level pitcher/player, among the best of the best. Perennial Cy Young/MVP Candidate. Dominant and consistent impact. Future Hall of Famer.
- 70 – #1 starter, dominant closer or high end offensive performer. Frequent All-Star with the ability to challenge for Cy Young/MVP awards. One of the top players at their position.
- 60 – #3 starter, 3rd tier closer, premier reliever or above average offensive performer. Inconsistent All-Star contender, among the better players on their team. Able to maintain a starting role without question.

Scouting scale

- 50 – #4-5 starter, 3rd-5th bullpen arm, average offensive performer. A big league average player who is guaranteed a roster spot but not a starting role. A role/platoon player.
- 40 – Emergency starter, swing man in the bullpen, part-time player. These players are starters in the minor leagues but rarely see much action in the big leagues.
- 30 – Non prospect player, who is a career minor leaguer. Is only used to fill roster spots on minor league clubs, will not see any action in the big leagues.
- 20 – Non prospect player who will not be drafted.

Report on Matz Schutte

Signed with the Minnesota Twins September 2014

- Matz Schutte, RHP
- Mechanics / arm action:
- I like his arm action, tendency to $\frac{3}{4}$, not overhand, overall pretty clean.
- Good delivery, overall good motion but his upper body should stay a bit more upright, could get some more velocity.

- Numbers (August 7th Game):
- FB 84/88, 89 once.
- CB 67/68 CH 70/73
- Reg pitch R1: 1.25 – 1.28
- 13/7 CB

- Competes out there, has a good mound presence. Good athlete who can hit too.
- Takes his time in between pitches, might get upset /losing focus quick.

- Comparison:
- Overall better than player XXX.
